- 2017-2018 Graduate Research Assistant, Knowledge Graph Mining, Soochow University, China

Research Interests

Interpretable Graph Mining. Traditional graph mining is limited to interpreting the prediction by graph models, such as GCNs, GAT, etc., which are black-box. Interpretable Graph Mining not only makes accurate predictions but also interprets why the results of the prediction are output by generating a specific type of structure, such as interpretable paths or sub-graphs.

Heterogeneous Graph Learning. Heterogeneous graphs such as academic graphs, social networks, knowledge graphs, etc., are much more complex than homogeneous graphs due to the different types of nodes and edges. Heterogeneous Graph Learning aims to learn the graph representation which can well utilize the characteristics of heterogeneity on graph-relevant tasks, such as node classification, link prediction, graph classification, etc.

Text and Multimodal Mining. Text Mining involves model processing, text understanding, and text generation, such as text classification, sentiment analysis, etc. With the help of pre-trained models, such as Bert, and Bart, etc., fine-grained sentiment analysis can help to understand and analyze the sentiments of input text accurately, whose performance is largely improved. Image captioning is one topic in Multimodal Mining to generate the summarized text from images and the relevant context.
